If there are many trees, their trees break up soil which makes the rain in and catch the soil strongly. They help stop it from being washed away easily.

The Tenth Anniversary of iPhone

This year, the iPhone reached its tenth anniversary after Apple introduced it to the world in 2007. Since then, the iPhone has become more and more popular. It is also one of the leading brands in the cellphone market now.
However, around the time the iPhone came out, some people hadn’t expected it to be this big. Some had even thought it would never come out.

“Everyone’s always asking me when Apple will come out with a cellphone. My answer is, ‘Probably never’.”
David Pogue, Sep. 27, 2006, The New York Times

Steve Ballmer, Apr. 30, 2007, USA Today

“iPhone set to struggle”
Jemima Kiss, Jun. 29, 2007, The Guardian

Ten years have passed, but people have not lost the interest in the iPhone. Instead, they expect more from it. This makes the above comments funny to read now.
The iPhone, along with the other smartphones, has made the world a smaller place. Everything about smartphones has become so much faster, and people’s lives have improved in so many ways. This kind of convenience has created a strong bond between people and their smartphones.

Don't think so? Let's play a game then! Ask your friends not to touch their smartphones and see how long it takes before they do. Don't be surprised by how quick that is. After all, based on the information collected by a screen lock app, most people check their phones up to 110 times a day.

Just when you think smartphones can't get any better, smartphone companies keep coming out with new models. Keeping people interested is important to them, so this trick never gets old. Apple just showed the world their best and most expensive model ever to celebrate their tenth anniversary. Although some people feel the new iPhone costs an arm and a leg, many of them are still interested in it. Even so, it's exciting to imagine where smartphones will take us in the next ten years.
