English is a living language spoken all over the world. In my opinion, speaking should come first in learning English. In the past, Taiwanese students pay more attention to reading and writing without too much practice in learning and speaking. Therefore, even university students cannot speak English very well after over ten years of study. Everyone knows that a person should be able to speak a language very well after he has learned it for one hundred days. Why can't Taiwanese students speak English well after three years of hard study at school? If there are at least two conversation lessons in a week to practice speaking and listening, maybe Taiwanese students can speak English much better.

Imagine people living in the moon. Imagine those people growing food, producing energy for Earth, and even opening hotels. It might sound impossible, but some people want you to think about it. This was the purpose of a contest in the United States. People were told to imagine a moon base for the year 2069.

People in the contest suggested cities, resorts, and even a gym. The judges asked them to come up with creative ideas. It was not important whether they can be real or not. The point was to think big. Will we ever see these things come true? We probably won't, but it doesn't matter. The judges want to remind us that if young people start imagining things today, those things may come true in the future.

Imagine this: It's a beautiful evening in the summer. You're playing baseball with your friends and having fun. But then the sun starts to go down! Soon it will be dark and you won't be able to play anymore. Wouldn't it be great to have one more hour of daylight? Well, with daylight savings time, you can! In places that observe daylight savings time, people set their clocks ahead one hour at the end of spring. Then they set their clocks back one hour in the fall. This means daylight lasts longer during the summer!

Many people like daylight savings time. They can spend more time outside when it's light. Also, because it's lighter at night, there are fewer traffic accidents. Daylight savings time also saves energy. People do not have to turn on their lights so early at night. They also spend more time outside instead of sitting at home watching TV. Some people, however, do not like daylight savings time. They think it's confusing. But, do not worry. It's easy to know which way to move your clock. Just tell yourself, "Spring forward, and fall back!"
