All cultures have coming-of-age ceremonies. However, they are usually quite different from each other. In the West, children become adults at eighteen. This is about the age when a person can drive a car, drink alcohol, and vote. In Japan, people come of age at the age of twenty. Every year on the second Monday of January, large ceremonies are held. Young women and men dress up for the ceremonies. They listen to speeches from their elders and receive gifts on that day.

Other parts of the world have much more unique ceremonies for new adults. In some places in Africa, young men go into the forest together. There, their elders teach them how to become adults. There are some interesting coming-of-age traditions in Taiwan as well. The Atayal people used to get tattoos on their faces. Withstanding the pain was what made them adults.

When you come of age, you will be free to do what you want. Also, you will be expected to be responsible for all the decisions you are about to make.
