(30-31) 30 in CoCoa

Chocolate is a popular treat, and it comes from the cocoa bean. About 70% of the world's cocoa beans come from Ghana and Ivory Coast. They have the perfect weather for growing cocoa. Making cocoa needs a lot of work. It also needs lots of workers. Over two million of them in Ghana and Ivory Coast are children between the ages of 5 and 17. The children work long, hard hours, use dangerous tools, and carry heavy loads. They also live in terrible working places and get little to no money.

Child labor on cocoa farms first came to light in the late 1990s. To end it, big chocolate companies signed an international agreement in 2001. Sadly, instead of decreasing, the amount of child got more and more. Some people and companies won't stand for that anymore. They only work with cocoa farmers without child workers. They also pay them well and sometimes higher prices for their cocoa. Those people and companies aim to show the dark side of cocoa. Most importantly, they're working to stop child labor in the chocolate industry.

(32-35) Why Do We Eat Popcorn at the Movies?

For many people, eating popcorn goes hand in hand with going to the movies. They can't have one without the other. But how did this happen?

In the mid-1800s, popcorn was already a popular snack. Vendors sold it on the streets and at fairs and circuses. They later moved their business to outside movie theaters in the early 1900s.

However, theater owners wanted nothing to do with popcorn. It would make their high-class spaces dirty. Eating it would also create too much noise during the silent movies.

When movies added sound, the eating noise problem disappeared. Also, people from all social classes could now enjoy the movies. Some of them even secretly brought popcorn into the theaters.

Before long, the theater owners realized something. Moviegoers didn't need to buy popcorn from street vendors. The owners could make and sell it themselves because popcorn was cheap and easy.

They did just that, and the smell of popcorn drew more people to their theaters. The owners made a lot of money, and people enjoyed themselves at the movies.
