【B】 A Nice Restaurant

Dear Cathy,

How are you doing? Yesterday was my birthday. My husband, Ken, took me to a nice restaurant. The restaurant is not only beautiful but also full of wonderful tastes. It serves customers tasty dishes from Japan and Thailand. Their Japanese dishes, such as sushi and salmon tempura, taste so good, and they are the best I can find anywhere. I really enjoyed the Japanese food there. As for Thai food, it serves spicy-and-sour duck and steamed seafood. They are also delicious, but just a little bit spicy for me. I know you like Thai food. Maybe next time when you come to visit me, we can go to the restaurant together. I think you will love the Thai food there. Please say hi to everyone there for me.

Love,

Mandy

These days, it is very important to protect your personal information when you're online. Here are some of the best ways to do it.

- 1. Don't share too much information on social media. You should be careful when posting about where you are, and you should check who can see your posts.
- 2. Always use strong passwords. Never use your birthday or common words that are easy to guess. You should use a mix of small and big letters, numbers, and symbols that is at least 12 characters long.
- 3. Make sure the websites you use are secure. If you are entering personal information, look for a lock symbol on the site and make sure that the address starts with "https." This should protect your information.
- 4. Be careful when opening any links in emails. You should only open a link if you trust the person or company that has sent it. First, check the email for spelling errors, which might mean the person or company is not real.
